Join the International Working Women's Day Coalition for a speak-out to link this historic occasion with today's struggles impacting women here and worldwide. What became a massive women's movement began in 1848 in Seneca Falls, N.Y. At the first national women's rights convention in 1850, Sojourner Truth, an African-American warrior against slavery and for women's rights, inflamed the crowd when she exposed the racist abuse, exploitation and "Invisibility" of women of African descent both in the women's movement and across the country. Her famous speech 'Ain't I a Woman' echoed those sentiments.

Today we must remain vigilant: The Right of African-Americans, Latinos/as, Indigenous & Immigrants To Vote Must Not Be Denied
